Hiring shouldn't take over your week.

- Reading CVs fills evenings that belong to your product.
- Interviews with the wrong people use up your best hours.
- Recruiting was never in your job description, but it landed on your desk.
- The more you grow, the more hiring you have to do.

You started a company to build something. Let someone else handle the search.

How Nocturnal Eye Talent Works:

1. Brief
In a 20-minute call, we define the role: the tasks, the skills that matter, and the salary range. This becomes the standard every candidate is measured against.

2. Search
We source and screen candidates ourselves. You only see people who match the brief.

3. Shortlist
Within 10 days, you receive 3 candidates, each with a short summary of why they fit.

4. Hire
You interview, choose, and make the offer. We stay in touch through the new hire's first month to make sure the start goes well.

Who this is for

Founders and HR leads at startups with 5 to 50 employees who need to fill junior or mid-level roles quickly, without building a recruitment team.

What you get

- A written brief, so you never start from scratch
- A search handled entirely by us

- A shortlist of 3 screened candidates
- Hours of your week back

Start with a 20-minute call

Tell us about the role. We will map it out and give you a shortlist date before the call ends. There is no cost and no obligation.

Subject: Are you tired of reading CVs?

Hi [First Name],

If you're hiring right now, you've probably spent hours skimming through dozens of CVs, looking for the right candidate.

Nocturnal Eye Talent exists so that you no longer have to do this part. We find and screen junior and mid-level candidates, and you only meet the people who match the role.

It starts with a free 20-minute call called the Role Brief. You tell us about the job, we write it up, and, within 10 days, we'll shortlist 3 candidates for you to choose from.

Subject: What happens during and after a Role Brief Call

Hi [First Name],

Here's a general view of what the whole process looks like:

- We talk for 20 minutes. You tell us about the role, and we write the brief: the tasks, the skills that matter, and the salary range.
- We give you a deadline which is within 10 days.
- We source and screen candidates, while you can focus on your work.
- You receive 3 candidates, each with a short summary of why they would be a good fit.
- After that, you interview, choose, and make the offer. We check in during the new hire's first month.

Your own time in all of this is the 20-minute call and the interviews you'd want to do anyway.

Subject: Before you decide

Hi [First Name],

If you haven't booked yet, I'm guessing there's a question in the way. These are the ones we hear most.

- "Is the call really free?" Yes. There's no cost and no obligation.
- "Do I have to hire through you afterward?" No. You can take the brief and leave.
- "What about fees?" We'll explain them on the call, before you decide anything.
- "What if my role is unusual?" That's what the 20 minutes is for. If we can't help, we'll tell you.
- "I'm too busy right now." That's usually the best time. The call is 20 minutes, and the search is on us.

We only open a few new searches each week so that every shortlist arrives within 10 days. If you want one of the spots, this is the moment.
